Cogeco Cable Canada named Company of the Year by Women in Communications and Technology

Montreal, February 20, 2014—Cogeco Cable Canada (“Cogeco”) is pleased and proud to announce that it has received the Company of the Year Award from Women in Communications and Technology (formerly known as Canadian Women in Communications) for 2013. This distinction underscores the company’s leadership efforts in supporting the advancement of women in the communications and technology industry.

“The role of women in the organization is of the greatest importance to us here at Cogeco,” said Louise St-Pierre, President and Chief Executive Officer, Cogeco Cable Canada, adding: “We firmly believe that our strengths lie, among other things, in our ability to attract the very best talent. The fact that women occupy so many senior executive positions at Cogeco is a clear indication of their significant contributions to the company’s success. This award provides further incentive for us to press forward and continue our efforts to support the advancement of women, not only within our industry, but in the wider business world.”

Representatives of Cogeco Cable Canada will be on hand to receive the award at Women in Communications and Technology’s Annual Awards Gala on April 7, 2014, at the Fairmount Château Laurier in Ottawa.
